

FEDOR MANOR NEWS

SANDY'S CORNER

Needless to say I was extremely disappointed when I read Dan's blurb. To think that our residents would discriminate against persons who suffer from a mental illness.

I raised two boys who suffered from Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder. The younger one went on to develop Depression as a result of continued failures and no one liking him or wanting him to be around because of his hyperactivity.

The bottom line is that people who suffer from a mental disorder, just want to be normal, like you and me. They can't help being plagued with this disease, and it's because of stigma like this that they refuse to seek help or take medication.

During this time I joined an organization called NAMI (National Alliance for the Mentally Ill). NAMI's mission was to remove/reduce the stigma associated with mental illness.

They taught that mental illness is a disorder of one of our body's organs—the brain. How many of us have problems with our heart, kidneys, liver, etc.....all organs in our bodies...yet we don't discriminate with people with heart disease or diabetes.

Think about that....think about that the next time you look at someone who suffers from a brain disorder. Think about how you can help remove the stigma of mental illness by including that person in your life, by looking at the good in the person rather on focusing on erratic behaviors that they cannot control.

Be a catalyst for change!

DAN'S BLURB

Happy July Everyone!

July- the month we celebrate our country's independence from Great Britain. And in doing so, our founding fathers set up a country based on the constitution and bill of rights that has flourished for 241 years. To a large extent, what has helped America and Americans flourish over all these years is a common goal of everyone helping everyone to move ahead, succeed, make a life where our children would have it better than we did.

I see less and less of this common goal today than I did yesterday, last year and in the last 20 years. People everywhere, more consumed by what's in it for them and what they get out of it. People seeing others less well-off and instead of offering help, wanting those people removed from their area so they don't bother them or infringe on their rights. When did we stop caring for one another?

Today, I was approached by someone during the lunch program, asking if several other participants could be removed from the lunchroom because they were "mentally ill" and bothering this person. Where is the compassion? The participants this person was referring to were causing no harm, just waiting for their lunches.

The problem is we expect other people to fix what is wrong in America. We blame the President or our representatives, governor or council people thinking they need to make laws or regulations that will make the difference. But the difference starts right there with you and right here with me. How we treat each other. Not excluding others because they are different, but including them because their differences make us stronger.

I don't like getting up on the soap box, so I will end with this. We all want the world to be a kinder, more understanding and compassionate place. But if we look the other way or shun those in need, doesn't that explain why it happens to us when we need help? By the People, for the People!

Don't forget that you have until noon time on Thursday July the 6th to sign up for a chance to win $50 in Farmers' Market Vouchers. Please see me if you are interested in signing up and as always, see me with any other needs you might have.

Have a great month!
